Office Action Summary

CLAIMS

112 First Paragraph Rejection

1. Claims 1-4 and 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention.

In claim 1, lines 3-5, it claims "said permanent magnet ... in a confronting spaced relation with the permanent magnet". This is questionable and not supported by the specification and drawings.

Art Rejection

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

1. Claims 1-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Fukuoka (US 5348370).

Regarding claim 1, as best understood, Fukuoka shows a vibration generator comprising:

A vibration generation portion having a spring member (42 in fig. 12), a permanent magnet (44) and an electromagnetic coil (45);

A driving circuit (on 48);

A casing (40, 50);

The spring member (42) is formed of a u-shaped leaf spring (see 42) to provide a vibration portion so that an actual length of the vibration portion is increased.

Regarding claim 5, Fukuoka shows a vibration generator comprising:

A vibration generation portion (40) and a driving circuit (on 48);

A leaf spring (42 in fig. 12) having a u-shaped vibration portion (see 42);

A permanent magnet (44) and an electromagnetic coil (45);

The permanent magnet (44) being disposed on the leaf spring (42) in a spaced confronting relation with the coil (45); and

A power supply terminal device (see 51a or terminals for coil 45).

Regarding claims 2-4, 6-15, Fukuoka shows:

The spring (42);

The circuit board (48);

The power supply and terminals and its circuit (circuit in 50, terminals for 45 and 51a);

The weight (40);

The yoke (46);

The magnet (44) can be integral or adhered or fitted with the spring (42).

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 16-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Fukuoka.

Regarding claims 16-17, Fukuoka shows a vibrator.

Fukuoka differs from the claimed invention in that it does not show that the design of such vibrator can be used for a phone vibrator.

However, it is commonly seen that phones have vibrator. Further, the claims claim "the vibration generator is used for portable phones". In other words, the claimed vibrator is an intended use in the phone environment. Therefore, it would have been obvious for one skilled in the art to use the design of Fukuoka's vibrator in phones, this simply can be considered as an intended use for Fukuoka.
